Fire or be Fired: Cases in Decision Making (Managing Local Government) John L. Pape

Managing Local Government: Cases in Decision Making: Fire or Be Fired demonstrates the level of complexity that can confront public administrators and presents a challenge found in both private and public sectors and at all levels of organizational responsibility: what to do when your boss, in this case the city council, wants you to violate your personal ethical principles. This e-book also features the ICMA Code of Ethics as a guideline for decision making.
